Tucson, Ariz. – Graduates from the University of Arizona College of Medicine – Tucson who successfully completed a distinction track during medical school recently were honored at a luncheon hosted by the University of Arizona Center for Integrative Medicine (UACIM).

Among those in attendance were 13 graduates who completed the Integrative Medicine Distinction Track (IMDT) developed by the UACIM. The track features online modules covering fundamental aspects of integrative health care and allows medical students to study and explore independently. Students in the Class of 2017 who completed the IMDT include Stefanie Brichta, Ellie Conser, Blake Gibson, Laurel Kittrell, Coya Lindberg, Thomas Lotina, Marci Macaraeg, Elyse Muratore, Wendy Reeve, Atlantis Russ, Jodi Solway and Prita Tandyasraya.

"These students have made a commitment to enhance their working knowledge of integrative medicine while in the midst of a rigorous medical school curriculum," noted Randy Horwitz, MD, PhD, director of the Integrative Medicine Distinction Track and UACIM medical director. "They have the intellect, drive and passion to become the next generation of caring, compassionate and skilled physicians. We are thrilled at their accomplishments; they are assets to the field of integrative medicine."

UACIM Executive Director Victoria Maizes, MD, lauded the accomplishments, "We are so proud of our distinction track students in integrative medicine. They pursued their passion to enhance the health of their patients by completing a robust set of requirements to graduate with this honor."

The IMDT is just one of many online educational offerings developed by UACIM, including the flagship Fellowship in Integrative Medicine.
